RHEUMATOLOGY

The Division of Rheumatology cares for patients with the full spectrum of rheumatologic disorders, including rheumatoid and psoriatic arthritis, systemic lupus and other autoimmune rheumatic diseases, as well as the spondyloarthropathies, vasculitides, polymyalgia rheumatica, fibromyalgia, osteoarthritis, osteoporosis, gout and related conditions.

Rheumatology clinics are offered singly and in conjunction with the Department of Orthopaedics. Providers also support the Osteoporosis Center, a multidisciplinary program to diagnose and treat patients with metabolic bone disease or those at risk of bone demineralization and fracture due to other medical conditions. Please see the Department of Orthopaedics for more information on this service.

Rheumatologists are also available for inpatient and outpatient consultation.
